Misery and Mercy Meet

In his lecture on the gospel of St John, St Augustine beautifully describes the moment in today's gospel story about a woman caught in the act of committing adultery – especially when the woman and Jesus were left alone. St Augustine said, (Two were left: misery and mercy). When we hear this gospel passage, we often focus on the woman's sin, which is certainly serious. Yet she is not the only sinner in this story. The scribes and Pharisees were guilty of pride and anger disguised as religious piety, directed not only towards the woman but also Jesus, whom they hoped to ensnare. Although one could say that Jesus did not condemn the scribes and Pharisees for their sin, neither offered them a word of forgiveness as he gave to the woman. Perhaps this is because the scribes and Pharisees had not recognised their own misery in the face of mercy, whereas the woman, dragged half naked into the streets to endure public scrutiny, had no choice but to stand silently in her misery.

Every time we pray the Lord's prayer, particularly when we say, 'Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us', we are given opportunity to bring our misery before God, whose name is Mercy. How often though do we say these words without careful attention and intention, without hearing them as a call to offer mercy as much as a plea for it?

As we pray the Lord's Prayer this week, let us be even more attentive to the meaning of the words, we pray so that we too might learn to act with mercy when we encounter another's misery, and thus sin no longer.
